

General Evaluation by George Mulligan, Pegasus Toastmasters Club

We started the not right exactly on time.
Cause Chris forgot to check his watch.
We'll forgive him that crime.

The meeting got off to a marvelous start.
making us all feel welcome Elizabeth's made a fine art.
She was quick to inform us exactly twelve years of this club.
And made us all eager with the promise of good grub.

On forgetting the meeting number she was some what irate.
Till someone yelled out 578.
But as Bessie would tell you don't apologize.
The meetings more fun when the audience replies.

Jann tried to bribe with some gateau cake.
Those that didn't turn up made a massive mistake.
Seeing things on the bright side was firmly enforced.
And quality over quantity strongly endorsed.

Then Elizabeth returned wearing a different hat.
Introducing our first speaker she had it down pat.
With no prior warning she got asked on the night.
But she rose to the challenge im sure much to the Toastmasters delight.

Then Chris did his speech on the topic of sleep
Kept it light bright and funny, not boring or deep
Their two hat wearing people this evening galore
As our Toastmaster Jann approached the lectern once more

This time introducing our next speaker John
The troubles of bath time was what that speech was on.

That speech was met with tremendous applause.
The kind any actor or speaker adores.

Then I came up my first job for the night
My trouble with cameras I explained you my plight
John's speech was critiqued a group performance review done
I discovered for the first time evaluations can actually be fun.
In suggesting improvements we were rather slack.
So John asked for recommendations to keep his speech on track.

There ended the first half public speaking for a short while we had to forsake,
to guzzle down grapes crispbread cheese tea, coffee and cake.
Twenty three minutes of food scoffing then ensued.
Till Elizabeth called us back to order all now in a great mood.

Jan took to the stage in her bubbly way.
Told us practical jokes played on April Fool's day.
The amazement was tangible it swept through the hall.
That people could somehow be quite so gullible.

Elizabeth came up reviewed speech number one.
And congratulated Chris on a good job well done.
A change to the schedule work but next week's meeting now.
We may be low on numbers but will run one anyhow.

Clare Yardley for table topics suggested between cries of oh dears.
To challenge us, something different table topics in pairs.
Foreign tourists with accents interacting with locals.
From strange sounding Irish, to American yokels.

Table topics successful they caused much delight.
Then the meeting was closed the end of another great night.
So now my times are over there's no more to speak.
Except have a great Easter and I'll see you next week.
